Cis women who date trans women, what do you like about us?

It's kind of beyond my reach because the cis women I have dated post transition refused to really expand on what they found attractive in me and it'd just be cool to know your logic on why trans women are attractive to you

So far all the cis women that have liked me have been kind of sadistic. Not to an extreme level, but I feel like they like that I'm kind of a weak person emotionally and physically. They like tickling me and making me uncomfortable and doing light physical bullying.

I like it over all as I kind of hate myself and I like being punished for it, but I absolutely find something about their behavior towards me to be off. Like they view me as pathetic and they like to see how far they can push me before I break a little and then they mend me back together with love. And of course, the fact that I really like that is also weird lol which is why it works pretty well I guess. I'm sure if I look into it too much I'll be pretty hurt by the truth. It's sort of how I felt with why men liked me, the more I looked into it, the more I was hurt by it. It's much easier to be like, "Well, she/he seems to like me, let's just stop there and enjoy it."

I remember one time I dropped something and screamed and then all the sudden I heard rapid foot steps and thud of her jumping down the last of the stairs to make sure I was okay. When I came back up I saw that she was playing an online game with her headset on the floor. She threw off the headset and left mid-match to rush to check on me. It was very cute. If I ever wanted something or needed something she'd always remember and get them for me. Every time she went to the store she'd get me some random snack that I liked.

my friend is a cis lesbian who is dating a trans girl. in adolescence, she was called a dyke more often than her own name and bullied for not dressing femininely. according to her, she appreciates that her gf sympathizes with the struggles of having to fulfill an aesthetic expectation in order to be taken seriously, or even treated as human. they're a really sweet couple. clearly love each other. she also likes that her gf writes poetry. dunno about their sex life, though.

I know it can understandably and justifiably be very hard for many tranners to accept this, but it is something worth considering. I'm a chaser (of cis girls, mtfs, and ftms) and mtfs often have that unique elven form of beauty everyone always brings up. Also, for ones who don't have genital dysphoria, many non-gay men are Creepy male feminist spotted who thinks simping for foids will get them pussy. All male feminists are doing it because they subconsciously hope being pro-women will make women attracted to you. Your probably a danger to women which is typical for male feminists. A man pretending that he is "one of the good men" is just a wolf in sheep's clothing. Male feminist types are usually just left-wing incels whom wind up being sexual predatory towards women because they subconsciously despise them. You should stay far away from women, you are a pitbull disgusing itself as a golden retriever.

Started befriending trans women to try understanding being trans without having to bug my gf so much about it. I like learning unconventional hobbies from them. Love their brutal honesty, even when it comes across as mean - especially if they melt when I degrade them. I also like how they can relate to being a minority within a minority, since I often feel like I don't quite belong in predominantly white Igbt spaces as a Latina woman.

Cis women like us because we were raised different from them and we have unique physical traits. We have our own brand of womanhood and they find it appealing. We relate to them, but we also offer a slightly different way of doing things and approaching things. And they like that we sort of create a power vacuum in relationships that they like to fill.

Honestly, most MTFs act too masculine to be taken seriously as women by ciswomen who have lived in female bodies their whole lives.

It's not worth obsessing over which behaviors are feminine and which aren't-- the obsession itself would mark you as "not a real woman" in some people's eyes. Dating an AFAB enby or a pooner is probably the best transbians can do.

Separate from that anon. It's a mixed bag desu. I have had some very abusive experiences with cis women before but since I have transitioned it's gotten a lot better.

If it's a hookup they're usually assholes but people i've grown to like over more time have turned out a lot better. I had a girl in college who was really nice. We both had ptsd so there was a mutual understanding around some things being hard. She was cute and nerdy and would talk about her stem work a lot and I loved to listen to the passion. Super supportive, loving, and was there for me.

She was ashamed of being a lesbian though so none of that was in public.......

Also she fucked me when I was too drunk to remember most of it, so that was weird? but i think i was asking for it. i think she just made a mistake tho.

The ptsd makes it hard to be with people. Besides that night, when I was asking for it, she was understanding, and gentle, and stopped when I was unsure or changed my mind. Most people don't want to deal with it, and never want to touch me again. A lot of people just don't listen. I got drunk myself and I was probably asking for it and she didn't know I was blackout and she, unlike the rest of the world, was nice and comforting and hugged me and said sorry instead of telling me I was a piece of shit.

If a cis sapphic were into the things I want to do I'd do it to her. They often aren't, so trans sapphics are more common. Both are women, they just tend to like different things and that is okay.

I don't see identity as tied to how badly you need to be dominated but I can see how some people on this board could get into those thought patterns.

That anon does not see trans women as women. They see us as men and keep pushing it for some reason. I don't know if they are trying to hurt us on purpose, or if they are a trans woman trying to hurt themselves, but it's awful to read. Also I'd like to start a family too with my hypothetical wife, but I worry I'm getting too old for it since I'm already mid-30s.

My gf does not want to adopt, so IVF is our first option, at her request. She wants to be a stay home mommy, and hopefully her career can accommodate that to an extent in the future. She already works from home and makes a comfortable living. But trans women have no agency, according to you, so obvs I'm a controlling, manipulative partner who is ISOLATING her and FORCING her to become DEPENDENT on me. (I think I could larp as you now, heh.)

You did the right thing, anon. Working on improving yourself will help your future relationships be stronger and happier. My gf and I started dating after we separately began therapy, and I'm happy for that. There was a time we stopped talking for a year because we were stupid, shitty teens. We later got to know each other better and learned to build a strong foundation for our friendship and eventual relationship. Of course we have conflicts, no one is perfect, but we resolve them as best we can.

Most of our issues just stem from sadness over missing each other when we are too busy to call. I can't wait to live together and come home to her every night, even if we are both too sleepy to do anything but cuddle. I wish all the happiness for you too! <3

Without any problem I've done it all my life. I'm older than most to you. I don't even like it! I'd rather be a gay guy but you don't even understand that? I'm not concerned about your jealousy of me because I pass as a woman! You saying I can't pass as a woman read that shit because passing is a woman is in the big deal with me!

I blew my life totally by getting a srs. Ended up in heteroville bored to death!

No one is talking about straight people. I dislike the fact that you'd reduce womanhood to birthing, considering I dread having to be pregnant someday. But it's just what's most convenient seeing as artificial wombs don't exist yet.

i haven't said that, this was the other anon. i think the average cis woman is pretty transphobic (but not as threateningly transphobic as the average cis man) but the average cis f "chaser" isn't nearly as bad as the average cis m "chaser". in fact even the cis woman chaser with the most bizarre fetichistic views of trans womanhood seem much more respectful and nicer to me than most men in general lol. like yeah many cis women that are interested in trannies will either want you to play into their "being topped by a dickgirl" fantasies or their sadistic fantasies that have already been mentioned in this thread but the chance of them actually treating you as a human is much much higher than a cis man treating you as one >>27769533 women with pcos do not go around impregnating other women - i'm not talking about physical traits, "passing" is irrelevant here, since those traits are completely involuntary.

You make me and the other sadists itt sound far edgier than we are. Also ignoring the fact that I've reiterated multiple times how inexperienced and insecure women aren't fun to degrade and that I'm into the same things with cis women. Plus, most people aren't strictly sadistic or masochistic.

You missed the point, still. Impregnating doesn't make you a man.

i'm not judging you for being sexually sadistic btw, i dont think this is abusive at all. i just used an example to illustrate my point of how even the average "fetishistic chaser" girl will treat you much better than your average man will, since they'll usually see you as a person that goes beyond just their fantasies (while men sometimes seem incapable of seeing trannies as anything other than some shameful sex object). i do not think i missed the point, in fact i just talked about that since there isn't really anything else to say about it? impregnating someone is a male action, there is no going around it. you can't come back from becoming a father.

Your point being that she >can't come back from becoming a father

Which misgenders her and implies she (and all trans women) experience dysphoria the same way you do. They don't. It's similar logic that shames non-op trans women as not being true trans because they don't have genital dysphoria.

Not to mention, I'd love to be able to impregnate her instead - this is a relatively common wish among cis lesbians, wanting to impregnate your gf. That doesn't mean I wish I was a man, nor would it make me suddenly trans or a father if science someday made that possible. Gross. Lol original anon & yes, impregnating is literally something you can't come back from.

It's literally the most "male" thing you could do & rejecting "maleness" is literally the whole point of being a trans woman, so, to 99% of people fatherhood just cancels out any claims to womanhood you ever make, it's irrevocably "male".

I want to impregnate my gf because it's the only way we can have kids, I could care less how people will judge me, least of all 4chan chuds.

If I could have her impregnate me instead, I'd do it 1000%, but until I get into biochem and live out my dream of bearing our children and making a happy family out of something unorthodox, I'll have a family however I can.

Fuck what people think.

at least you acknowledge it's male, but yes, the only way to have kids & retain womanhood is to either adopt or bear them yourself.

It's great that you want kids to the extent you're willing to give up transness & revert to a male role to have them, it's beautiful, in a certain way

I'm just genuinely shocked you've been at this all day, regardless of if you're brainwormed enough to believe this shit or not.

I never "acknowledged it's male," I stated I didn't care and nobody else should either. Gender roles are mattering less and less, and if the approval of people is all I'm chasing (zing), there's nothing to aspire to.

I'll be sure to ask your opinion somewhere deep in the back of my head as they're being born though, since you have this tendency to arbitrarily exclude yourself and others for dumb, archaic reasons.

Toodles. Surprised you're not one of the types who thinks I want to fuck myself because I love a cis girl.
